

The Timple House-Museum

About The Timple House-Museum

The Timple House-Museum is a space which combines the functions of a museum, a center for studies and a cultural space. Its main aim is spreading, preserving and studying Canary Island's traditional culture using the timple, one of the most representative musical instruments in the archipelago, as its central axis.

The museum presents, as its central element, a wide collection of timpls and other instruments from different countries that give a dimension of the use made of these small guitars in different points of the planet.

At the same time the visitor could get closer to Teguisse's Folklore, contemplate the stages on the construction of a timple, and enjoy different audiovisual presentations inside a patrimonial environment of great architectural interest.
